“ To Cory's family I send my deepest condolences. I worked with Cory at the hospital for 3 & 1/2 years and he was my favorite person on the staff to work with. He knew everything, could answer every question I had and always was so calm and good natured. We often played word games to get through the tedious tasks and he and I became quite competitive. I am beyond sad that this has happened. Know you raised a sweet young man who worked hard and was well-liked and respected. I will miss him and hope he rests in peace. Most sincerely, Stephanie Smith

“ Where do I begin? I have been friends with him since kindergarten. Used to take the same bus. Always kept in touch. Got a little apart from each other after high school. But always made it a point to talk when we saw each other. Who knew I would end up working with him at the hospital. The last few years we became reconnected and never stopped talking. He was my secret Santa and now I will be fishing as a hobby because of him. Thank you for everything. You were like a brother to me. I miss and love you. Until we meet again my friend.

Jeremey VanAllen - December 25, 2015 at 05:11 PM

“ Cory was my best friend, my love, my heart and soul, he was my everything. We had the most fun this summer, with the kayak, the funniest thing we did, was take a trip up the river, the current wasn't bad going up towards Coxsackie but we got tired and hot so we stopped and swam on a little remote beach. It was quiet and intimate, we sat and talked for a while, about things we don't normally talk about. He smiled and made the sun look dark. We decided to go back to the dock where we took off from, realizing that the current was fighting us harder than we thought it would. We were trying to get an idea for how much further by where we were by looking at the train tracks. "That's the stiper fishing spot" "no its not it's further down, don't argue with me," all those rocks look the same from the river by the way. It took us over an hour to paddle back to the docks even though we only paddled up river for a half an hour. When we got back we looked at each other and laughed, said "never again" and decided to go to burger King to fill up after all that hard work.
