“ I’m one of Erica’s college roommates’ younger sister. The first time that I met Erica, the words that come to mind are: genuine, a bright light, a loving person, and a ball of joy and laughter. She is one of the few people who you meet in life where you feel as though you are in the presence of what is equivalent to being with family. It was almost as though she had this sixth sense where she was always so in-tuned to your feelings. When my sister first moved to Boston, Erica and I would carpool together to go spend the weekend there. I so wish that back then they had dashboard cameras where we could have recorded how much we laughed the entire drive. I’ll never forget there was one time we were on the outskirts of the city yet stuck in bumper-to-bumper traffic where we were not moving for so long. Our jokes had escalated to the point where she looked at me and asked, “should we just get out and run!?” (Insinuating we leave the car behind). I just remember how hard we were laughing and how much fun it was with her no matter what the situation was. I still think about those car rides when I pass certain landmarks that we had passed together. My condolences to her family—I am praying for you. 🧡
