“ It is now less than a month away from the 2 year mark n it still feels like yesterday to me.. i wish i had more time to mend things with my daddy. I wish my kids had more time with him. We had a not so great relationship and i put him through alot growing up n making the wrong choices.. N by the time i got my shit together to make him proud of me, he was already sick and giving up on taking care of himself. We all pitched in and tried to motivate him, tried to get him to go to the drs n checked on him frequently, but we all know how stubborn he was. He tried to mend with all of us n make sure we were all ok before his time came, its like he knew.

I miss you daddy. I think of you often, i see your old truck all the time n it triggers memories. i still have your robert hull towing calender on my windshield. Your flashlight on my keychain. And the thought and memory of you in my heart forever. I love you.

“ Uncle Robert, I still can't believe your gone. I don't think it's fully hit me yet but Everytime I think about how I won't get any random phone calls or texts just to say hi or joke about random crap, it becomes a little more of a reality. We are going to miss you at family gatherings you were always the one cracking jokes and making everyone laugh, you always got us all going. You were always there for anyone and everyone. Many of the the best memories I have growing up were with you being you, being a wise ass just to be funny. And you most definitely were! I remember you wrapped potatoes in tin foil and threw them in the fire pit and called them baked potatoes, they were rocks....and catching the burgers on fire and chasing uncle pee wee with them around the yard, the same burgers you put garlic on as a prank because you knew he hated it. I hope you know how much you were loved and will be missed. XOXOXO I love you rest in peace.
